The first of the triptych Armirihi–Limniona–Tsakaios of Mesochori. It is a small, sweet beach, with turquoise waters and two sea caves at the end (they also have shade), which you reach by walking through the shallows. It is protected from the wind and has white, fine pebbles.

The water deepens sharply as soon as you enter, and umbrellas and the like must be taken with you. You will find Greek cuisine as well as a cute cafe–bar. Because it is a very popular beach, in August you should expect a big crowd and lots of cars.
