

Gaidouromantra beach

37.31855855, 24.401339647001

Gaidouromantra beach, situated to the south-east of Kythnos, is difficult to access but well worth the effort. The secluded beach offers an abundance of white sand and pebbles, as well as crystal clear waters. At either end of the beach are rocky hills, and a few trees offering shade can be found in the east. Despite its remoteness, the beach remains peaceful and tranquil – perfect for a swim and a relaxing break.

If you head to the west end of the beach, you can find Andrianos stream coming from the nearby hills. On the eastern hill, you can see the chapel of Agia Sotira, and from there you can get a stunning view of the beach. Just remember to be well-prepared as there are no shops or restaurants around the area of the country houses. Also, make sure you don't bring too much stuff as you can only access the beach by going down some steps.

Overview

|                    |             |                 |
|--------------------|-------------|-----------------|
| Purpose: Excursion | Type: Beach | Country: Greece |
| City: Kythnos      |             |                 |